Dear Friends of St. John the Baptist,

Just a few days before Holy Week, I received the heartbreaking news that a dear friend of mine of many years, Fr. Virgilio Elizondo, had passed away. Sadly, it was covered by the San Antonio newspapers, where Fr. Elizondo lived most of his life, that he had tragically ended his own life. If you read any of the newspaper accounts that appeared in the national media, you know that Fr. Elizondo was a very accomplished priest for over fifty years. For some years, he was the Pastor of the Cathedral of San Fernando in the heart of San Antonio, he contributed to Catholic television programming, and he was a professor of theology and author of many books. He was known well beyond Texas for his many contributions to the Church and society, and he was also a tenured professor on the faculty of Notre Dame University in Indiana. So, you can understand the impact that such a tragic and sudden loss had on the lives of thousands of Catholics throughout Texas and the United States.

I was blessed to know Fr. Elizondo from the time I was in the seminary in Europe, where he would come periodically to the University of Louvain in Belgium to participate in meetings of an editorial board of a publication called Concillium. When he discovered that I was from Texas, he extended the warm hand of friendship to me, encouraged me, and would often invite me to join him for a meal during his brief stays at the university. In 1986, once I was ordained a priest, our friendship continued, but especially during the years I served on the faculty of the seminary from 1995-2000. It was in those years, that Fr. Elizondo was a source of support and inspiration to my work and ministry.

Over the course of the last couple of weeks, I have been trying to sort out the meaning of the loss of this good man, and I have wondered why someone, who based their whole life on the ministry of Jesus and the hope of the resurrection, would fall into a depression that would ultimately lead to taking his own life. I suppose I will never know the answer to these questions. But I do know, that the lives of all human beings should never be reduced to one single act, much less the most tragic event of their lives. Instead, the life of every person should be viewed in the totality of all its parts and pieces. We are the sum of all our parts, including all our joys and sorrows, all our hopes and dreams, all the good that we have ever done, and all the good that we will ever hope to do. From the moment of our conception, we are made in the image and likeness of God. We are all his children, and especially at the moment of our own death, he embraces us with his mercy and his inexhaustible love. Fr. Elizondo, may your soul and the souls of all the faithful departed, through the mercy of God, rest in peace. I pray that the hearts of all whose lives you touched will receive comfort and consolation.

Sincerely in Christ,
Fr. David
